Dedication

Although Mr. Monger has been with us a short period of time we have learned to respect and admire him for his many outstanding personal qualities. He is a truly dedicated educator putting much emphasis on scholarship but demands only of one the best he can do.

It has been a pleasant two years that we, as Seniors, have experienced with this friend of education at the helm. He has always been willing to take time and talk with us about our problems and regardless of the seriousness of the problem he has been able to give us words of encouragement and inspire us to set our goals high. He has been an exacting disciplinarian but we have been the winners as his strong hand has directed us in the right path as we traveled this way towards our adult life.

In deep appreciation for his kindness, understanding and inspiration, we, the members of the 1960 HORNET'S NEST, dedicate this book to Mr. Hubert W. Monger, principal.

THESE THINGS WE SEE EVERY DAY

The Seniors

We, the Senior Class of 1960, find that we are at the close of the last year of our high school life. We now realize something that didn't occur to us when we were those frightened Freshmen; that the education and knowledge we received here will go with us into whatever paths we choose in the future. For some of us this is not the final step of our education, while for others, this is the end. What education we have received here, whether it be great or small, will be a most important factor in our future life. As long as we live, we, the Senior Class of 1960, will remember Wilson Memorial (particularly our Senior year) with fond memories and cherished hopes of greater things to come.

Juniors, can you believe it? We've had three big years of high school at Wilson and there is only one more to go! As "Jolly Juniors" we have taken part in many more activities than in previous years. Of course we are looking forward enthusiastically to the formal Junior-Senior Prom in the spring. Next we will reach the peak in our high school education, as we approach graduation. We should be sure to make the most of our remaining years.

OFFICERS

Secretary—Becky Stover, President—Steve Sniteman, Vice-President—Sherry Fox, Treasurer—John Forrer.

We, as sophomores, on entering school in September were already familiar with the system at Wilson, but on the first day, there lay before us the ever present undertakings of getting used to new classes, schedules, and people. After a few mistakes and changes we were ready to settle down to a year's hard work.

Next year we are looking forward to our classmates being in varsity athletics, and the many other things that come with being upperclassmen.

NEVER TO BE FORGOTTEN

When we skipped from the eighth grade to the tenth-all in one summer's time.

The part of our group who hadn't studied were ninth graders.

The big election campaign. Steve Sniteman won and has made a fine president and leader.

The first day of school when we found out whose homeroom we were in and who of our friends we had been so ruthlessly separated from.

Those horrible mid-term exams.

That nightmarish week when we took STEP and SCAT tests.

Those of our number who made the athletic teams.

Our new teachers.

New students who became a part of our class.

Our Pep Rallies and Big Games.

Standing in line for lunch and then finding out it was something we didn't like.

Being a Sophomore during the year 1959-60 at WMHS.

Our Freshmen

Wilson's Ninth Grade

Due to the 12 year system installed at Wilson this year, we have a very small Freshman class. In 1963 we will have the smallest graduating class in the history of Wilson, the largest being 263.

We're small but we'll be heard from as time goes by.

Judy Brubeck: What position do you play on the football team?

Bench Warmer: Oh, sort of crouched and bent over.

* * * *

A familiar quote is, "Seven days of school would make one weak."

* * * *

Mrs. Black: Nancy, can you tell us who wrote Beowulf?

Nancy S.: I-I did know but I've forgotten.

Mrs. Black: How unfortunate! The only living person who has known and she's forgotten.

* * * *

Critics: People who go places and boo things.

* * * *

Mr. Ridgeway: Patsy, what is the formula on the board? Patsy Tinsley: Er—ah I have it on the tip of my tongue.

Mr. Ridgeway: Well you'd better spit it out quick! It's nitric acid.

* * * *

Miss Woody: Girls, I have a man outside I would like you to meet.

Athletic Type: What can he do? Literary Type: What does he read?

Chorus Type: How much money does he make?

Wilson Type: Where is he?

* * * *

Mr. Wilson: This is the fifth day this week that I've had to send you to the office. What have you to say?

Barbara Gibson: I'm glad it's Friday!

* * * *

Policeman: (to struggling man in private pond) "Come out of there! You can't swim in there!"

Mike Cassell: "I know I can't, that's why I'm yelling for help!"

* * * *

Stranger in town: "Tell me, young man, have any big men been born in this town?"

Philip Weaver: "Nope, only babies".

* * * *

Peggy Palmer: "What has a lake but no water, a road but no pavement, and a forest but no trees?"

Judy Gleason: "I don't know, what does?"

Peggy: "A map".

Welcome!

Wilson's First Eighth Grade

President—Bobby Thompson, Vice President—Martha Forbes, Secretary—Judy Wells, Treasurer—Glenn Simmons, Reporter—Jimmy Guynn.

Wilson seemed so big when we came on August 31 to start another school year. There were about 425 of us but it didn't seem that many when all the upperclassmen came the following day. It was a new experience to have classes scattered all over such a large area. We realized for the first time that we were at last high school students and that this was just the beginning in our education.

Bust of luck

THINGS WE WERE FRIGHTENED OF AT WILSON

The long, long corridors.

The sameness of everything (eve ything looked alike).

Getting lost and having to spend the night.

So many teachers.

New type lessons.

The infirmary and the nurse.

Being called to the office to face Mr. Monger or Mr. Booker.

Not having a good time.

ALL THESE THINGS WERE IN OUR MINDS WHEN WE ENTERED BUT NOW WE WOULDN'T CHANGE IT FOR THE WORLD.

Safety Club

The Safety Club, composed of bus drivers and their assistants, meets with Mr. Berry, who is in charge of all Wilson drivers, on the third Thursday of each month in the conference room to discuss current problems facing the drivers and policies for safe and efficient bus operation.

The 30 buses which are now in operation at Wilson transport over 1400 high school students from outlying points as McKinley, Harriston, Swoope, Greenville, Stuarts Draft, New Hope, and Middlebrook. In addition to being bus drivers, the members give their services in patroling at athletic events, plays, concerts, final exercises and other school activities. It is the aim of the Safety Club members to encourage all students to become safety conscious through assembly programs, as well as through home and class room projects.

PLEDGE

As a true 4-H club member I pledge my head to clearer thinking, My heart to greater loyalty, My hands to better service, And my health to better living For my club, my community, And my country.

The Girl's 4-H club meets on the first and third Monday of each month. The projects for this year are improving personal appearance, as well as outside projects such as canning, cooking, sewing, room and home improvements and many other helpful projects.

The goal of the club is to promote better understanding and relationship between the club members and the people in the community.

Miss Patricia Asbell, adult adviser, meets with the club to help them live up to their motto which is "To Make The Best Better."

The Future Farmers of America is a national organization of farm boys studying Vocational Agriculture in high schools across the country. Although its activities on the national, state, and local line are too numerous to mention, some of the highlights are: Forestry, Crops, Basketball, Public Speaking, Tractor Driving, Poultry Co-op Quiz and Livestock Contest. As a result of these activities the boys gain many values of life and farming.

Recreation is not forgotten in the busy schedule. Some of the social events held by the chapter are: the annual Father and Son Banquet, a summer picnic and several others including the state F.F.A. camp where the boys spend a week of relaxation and enjoyment on the James River.

Memories of You

As I stood upon the mountaintop, With all its beauty fair, I breathed a sigh and thought of you, And longed to have you there.

As I gazed upon the treetops, And on the valleys down below, That tide of longing within my heart, Began to grow and grow.

The breezes blew across my face, And played softly through my hair, It was your hand caressing me, As I stood enchanted there.

As I walked along the pathways, With their beauties rich and rare, In dreams, you were by my side, I could almost feel you there.

Oh, that you were mine, my dear, How wonderful it would be, To stand upon the mountaintop, And hold you close to me!

Ronnie Brubeck

A Serious Mood

When you are in a serious mood, And all alone, and think deep thoughts. Doesn't it make you feel somehow more mature? When you can truthfully analyze yourself, or You grasp something you never understood before, It spurs you on into deeper, denser thoughts. You feel intoxicated; thoughts seem to close you in. You wonder if you'd put them down Into words, if people might think of them As worth passing on, like Shakespeare. Even if they'd mean nothing to others, You've understood, yourself. They've been your own thoughts, Others may have understood before, but You've made them your own, original, By some serious inspiration. They leave you feeling somehow more worthwhile To others in this world.

Judy Gleason

How High the Moon

In silent times, my soul does cry, That such should be my fate. To live without a brightened sky, My destiny, to wait. Morose time etches to be Too slow, life ends too soon. In night's dark cover I warily see Oh Love — how high the moon!

Carole Bales

Thanksgiving Day

Had not the Pilgrims come our way We would not know Thanksgiving Day.

God placed a harvest on the land Where nothing stood but rock and sand.

We thank Thee Lord on this day For thy kind and giving way.

We pray dear Lord for those so dear And bless the abundant foregoing year.

And bless, dear Lord, the ones to come And may they have a harvest home.

The whole world stops for earnest prayers During the reverent Thanksgiving Day hours.

But our thanksgiving shall never cease While praying dear Lord for lasting peace. Kathy Ballew

A Trip

We four Virginia boys Took a trip to Illinois. We were delegates from our state To learn to better cooperate.

We were sore from riding so far In Mr. Feagan's auto car. But when we saw all those girls We didn't have a sore in the world.

The Southern States paid our bill And the memories linger still. We heard ideas from the whole U. S., Then decided which were best.

We heard speeches by many men, And some seemed to never end But along with the boring we had many joys, And this is the trip of the Virginia boys. Sonny Balsley

America, My Home

I live in America, America the free. And of all the countries Here I wish to be.

I think about my forefathers
Brave soldiers—and true,
And I wonder about the trials
And what perils they went through.

If I were living in that time I wonder if I'd be Like all of those brave soldiers
For the war of liberty.

I think about George Washington, Ben Franklin and all the rest Who from its mere beginning Gave to America their best.

And what about Abe Lincoln A simple lad was he;
But he made so much possible For this new land to be free.

God blessed us as Americans Our noblest gift of all. And we as American patriots Must support her—rise or fall.

Yes, I live in America, America, the free And I am very fortunate That God has chosen me.

Yes, I'm a free American And I'm ready to meet the test. And while supporting America I'll do my very best.

Kathy Ballew

Contrast

If you feel like being gloomy, Look around and you can see There are oh, so many reasons To be as sad as you can be. Everyone seems mean and spiteful, This world is getting worse each day, Life is really not worth living If you want to feel that way. If you feel like being cheerful, It will be easy, just to find, Everybody seems so busy Seeking ways to be kind. And if only you will notice, You'll discover that it's true, Whether people are cross or happy All depends a lot on you.

Patsy Tinsley

A Summer Dream

It began like a slow spell of sleepiness that you could not shake off. It began to progress until you were in a drowsy trance. Then you started to dream.

Your dream began with a bit of kindness and a gentle liking.

You began suddenly to walk in a different world. The sun always shone, everything was beautiful. Everything was shared. The sunsets of late evenings were treasured moments often given a lasting memory by a tender kiss or a kind, gentle word.

A walk in the park with a full moon. Everything in silvery, from its great beams. The dark blue of the lake, all very placid and lovely in quiet of the night.

The sweet ring of the summer serenade of crickets and frogs at night. The warm, gentle breezes of night following a hot day. Precious moments spent together sharing each other's thoughts.

The slow pitter-pat of a summer rain on the roof as you lay awake thinking of your own newly discovered world.

You cling to your new world with a strange eagerness. Your new world surrounds you and keeps you contented. It gives you that wonderful feeling that you are somebody special.

Then just when you're sure you want this new world, when you know you would like to dream indefinitely, you wake up and your world has vanished. There is a strange, empty, vague feeling deep inside.

Now you realize you have experienced a Summer Dream, a first-love.

Marie Ann Kasuba

Overtime

It is the fourth quarter of a thrilling basketball game with two undefeated teams, Central and Southside, battling it out for first place. Central was leading with approximately 4 minutes left in the game. Their lead was fairly comfortable and they felt confident that they had this one in the bag; 55 to 48 and their ace Bobby Richardson was having the night of his life.

Tw-e-et the whistle of the official sounds. Central is overcome; their ace has fouled out. Southside inspired by this seems to come alive. Jimmy Wilson, who was fouled by Richardson, calmly strokes his two free throws—the score dropped to 55-50. 3 minutes, 31 seconds remaining. Southside settles down to a cool and deliberate game. Steve Monroe who is now playing his type game seizes a Central pass and converts it into a basket, slicing the score 55 to 52.

Central recovering, controls the ball desperately until there are 2 minutes 10 seconds left. Randy Wilson attempting to save the game for Central by shooting but the ball spins out of the basket. The gym is bedlam as the fans are going all out for their teams. Southside gobbles up the rebound with Butch Young doing the honors. Southside works for the good shot, Wayne Smith sees that shot and hits an easy push shot from the foul line with 1:13 showing on the clock.

The score, 55-54.

Central desperately worried, and facing a full court press manages to bring the ball up the court attempting to freeze it when Steve Monroe, gambling, fouls Central's Rodney Clark. 39 seconds left. Clark is at the line for two shots. Taking cautious aim and breathing deeply to relax, he shoots. Good! Now the gym is in a silent hush as the tension mounts. He shoots; around the rim it spins and drops out.

Southside rushes in and Charlie Bates takes the rebound. Time is called—34 seconds left in the game with the score 56 to 54.

Play is resumed with Southside taking the ball at mid-court. Southside controls the ball and the seconds tick 9, 8, 7,—Steve Monroe gets off an easy layup and the score changes to 56-56. Central grabs the rebound and takes it down court racing time, but before they can set up a play the buzzer sounds 56-56 is the score.

In the overtime period the two teams continue to battle it out, neither managing to score. The score is still knotted with 1 minute and 30 seconds to play. Randy Wilson hits for Central and the score is 58-56. But Southside counters with Charlie Bates hitting the bucket for the two. 58-58 and 57 seconds left to play.

Wilson has a calm hand and again hits, Central leads 60-58 the time 33 seconds. Southside refusing to give up calmly brings the ball down the court and again attempts to get the easy shot. 6 seconds are left; Monroe fires a jump shot and misses. Charlie Bates rebounds with three seconds to go flips it to Butch Young for another shot. Butch fires and misses; but wait, the whistle has sounded. Butch has been fouled and will shoot two shots. He must make them as time has run out. The pressure is on and Young feels it. He shoots. Swish! He hurls the second shot—around and around it spins and drops—out!

Central has withstood the gallant challenge of Southside and won the game 60-59.

A Student's Prayer

Our Heavenly Father,

I must leave this life and world temporarily behind me and seek out a refuge of utter contentment. One must constantly be dreaming, planning, and, yea, reminiscing. Only while in contact with Thee can I really forget trivial worries and come to Thee with an open mind and heart.

As a student of an American heritage, I have but one question. My God, who has given me the tools with which to work, and the power and strength to conquer all, and just what is my personal job as a student of this vast and powerful country?

I know it is not merely just to give gifts to my teachers at Christmas nor is it to say "Yes, Ma'am" or "No, Sir" nor is it to simply to do my assigned homework. There must be more.

Isn't my ultimate goal to reach Thy side and my heavenly home? What, then, as a student, can I accomplish by doing twenty specified math problems? Will this help me after I have left this journey to go up instead of down? What if I should die tonight? Most of my entire life has been exercised by attending school. I've never destroyed a human life, nor committed adultry, nor sworn against Thee, but how can I, who have not really been exposed to the outside world, be sure of achieving the ultimate goal?

I feel as though my life is a complex puzzle, having all of the parts, but not knowing where exactly to put them. Have others at my age felt the same?

Is it just I who feel this way?

I thank Thee for a full and happy life I have thus far shared with Thee. As a student, a layman of all knowledge, I have Thee to thank for giving me the strength to use my knowledge to the fullest extent. I was given a mind and a body to use and I have sincerely tried. There have been trying times when failure seemed to be the omega of my existence. These are times when I had only Thee to lean on. Teachers, parents, and friends were not understanding. Only after conversing with Thee was I able to get up and try again. Besides the failures I have also been successful. These were happy experiences and I know

I can never forget them.

But along with having experiences, there must be another purpose in this world for me to endure. After all, in less than ten years, this will be my world in which I and the other people of my generation will have unlimited power. Am I doing my job, as a student to prepare myself for this life, and the life hereafter? This My Father, is the prayer I wish to have answered.

Amen, Emily Hewitt

The Victor

"Just give me one more chance," Henri pleaded.

"I've told you before, I can't risk having another show with your lion act. There's no daring in your performance and people just won't buy tickets to see a lion tamer who's afraid of his own lions," concluded Mr. Keller, manager of the Tingling Bros. Circus.

"You mean I'm through?" Henri asked as he stared at Keller with disbelief. "I'm sorry, but you just don't have what it takes anymore," he replied.

Mr. Keller shook his head slowly as he watched the tall, brown-haired figure walk defeatedly out of his office.

Henri couldn't get over his dismissal from the circus. How could he live without it. The sawdust, the roar of a crowd, the laughing clowns and stirring strains of a band were all a part of him.

As he walked past the row of lion cages, he felt sad, because he was leaving these lions that had become like persons to him. He paused at the last cage which held Terra, the lion that had caused the accident. Henri's hand quivered and he turned away from the baleful yellow-green eyes of the huge lion.

It had been almost a year since his circus job. The year had gone by slowly because he was not satisfied in his job as clerk in the local general store. Inside he yearned for the circus again.

One bright sunny afternoon in the early fall, Henri was trudging home after a busy day at the store, when a brightly-colored poster caught his eye. He read it quickly. The circus was coming to town in exactly three days! He read further. In boldface type he saw Terra's name, which was a main attraction for the circus. He wondered how many other men had lost the battle with Terra.

The leaves were just beginning to turn and the warm sun smiled upon the grown-ups and children hurrying to buy their tickets. The band was playing merrily and the ponderous elephants marched in the ring holding each other's tails in their trunks. The trapeze artist and tightrope walker brought ohs and ahs from the crowd. Everyone was enjoying the show and their popcorn, too.

Meanwhile, two hired hands working for the circus were inspecting the crowd and its profits.

"We ought to come out pretty in this town. I think everybody and his brother came," remarked Ben, a short, elderly man.

"Yeah, and this is a beautiful day for the circus, too," added young Joe, who had joined the outfit only a few weeks ago.

"Hey, a man up there sure looks familiar," said Ben, squinting his eyes at a spectator.

"Maybe he's worked at the circus before," suggested Joe.

"Oh, I remember. His name is Henri Vatsic. Used to be a lion tamer, but he had an accident with that lion Terra. Ever since then he's been plumb scared of that lion," recalled Ben.

"Look! Here comes Terra into the ring now," exclaimed Joe.

Henri watched the large lion walk defiantly into the large cage with the other cats. The trainer cracked his long whip and the snarling lions took their places on their boxes, all except Terra. He ignored the loud whip and the commands of his trainer. Stealthily the lion strode closer to the man. As he crouched upon his stomach, the trainer turned to run in fear. Fleeing from the cat, he opened the cage door and ran away. Terra ran out of the cage and stopped for he was confused by the screaming crowd that was scattering fast.

Henri knew this was the only chance he'd have to do away with the fear that had been inside him for a year. He stood up ready to face whatever happened. He told himself to think of people in danger, and not of his own fear.

With this he ran down from his seat to the ring. Someone sensed what he was going to do and handed him a whip.

He slowly advanced on the cat and cracked the whip hard on the ground. Terra's eyes shone with hatred and he raised his paw as if to play with the whip. Henri remembered all his previous years of experience and put forth every ounce of courage to put the great beast slowly, but surely, back in the cage. Anxious circus people watched the defiant lion fight every step of the way in vain.

Just as he backed the lion into his cage, Terra ripped his paw down Henri's leg, leaving a gaping wound behind. Nevertheless the cage door shut and Terra was once again a captive of man.

Amidst the victorious cheers of the crowd, Henri heard Mr. Keller's voice exclaiming how he needed a good lion tamer like Henri.

Henri felt no pain in his leg at all for his heart was full of joy. Not only because he had conquered Terra, but he now ruled over his own fear.

Jan—Detective, First Class

The October Saturday dawned clear and cold. A brilliant sun rose over the forest, where all the leaves had turned to red, yellow and orange. Janice awoke, tingling with an expectancy that seemed to be everywhere. Jan was sure this was going to be no ordinary day. Something was bound to happen.

Now she knew! New neighbors were coming. The rickety old house down the road that had been empty so long, was finally getting new occupants. Since she had no brothers or sisters, Jan hoped there would be children about her age.

She had turned 13 just last month, and she was proud of her age.

"I wonder why no one has ever moved into that house before," said Jan idly, as she dressed. "Plenty of people have looked at it. Well, I'll ask mom about it when I go down for breakfast. Gee, I'd better hurry or that delicious bacon I smell will be all eaten."

"Mom, do you know why no one has ever moved into the old house down

"What do you mean, Jan?—The old Wilson Place?"

"Yes, that's the one. It's been so long since the Wilsons lived in the house, I'd forgotten their name."

"Well, let me see," said Mother, sitting down with a cup of coffee. "You know there was just old Mr. and Mrs. Wilson living there. I think they had some children, but they had all grown up and moved away. Mr. Wilson was quite a wealthy man, but he was also quite eccentric. He kept all of his money hidden in the old house. Then one night the Wilsons disappeared, and no one has heard of them since. People say the ghosts of the two old people haunt the house now. I guess that's why no one has ever bought the house."

"Oh. ... I heard a big truck. Will it be all right if I go down and see if it's the new family?"

"Of course, dear. Be careful and don't be too late."

Jan skipped happily down the road, thinking how wonderful it would be if there were children her age. But as she came closer, her steps seemed to drag, for a strange sense of foreboding had suddenly come upon her. Some sixth sense told her she shouldn't go on, but a little girl's curiosity was stronger. A few steps more and there was the old house, set well back off the road. The wall of trees looked like a fortress guarding the house.

"I know I saw something move, but there doesn't seem to be any noise or activity anywhere else. Well, I guess they don't have any children, for I don't hear them. May be there is an old couple living there. I wonder where that truck is I heard this morning. Oh, there it is. It looks as if someone tried to hide it...they did a good job of it."

Jan still wondered why there was no activity. She walked slowly up to the door. Just as she lifted her hand to knock, she heard a harsh voice at her elbow.

"What are you doing here? Don't you know this is private property? I don't want any kids snooping around here!"

All the time the man had been talking, Jan had been too scared to turn around. Now she turned slowly and looked up into the cruelest face she had ever seen. The squinty, evil-looking eyes, the black bushy eyebrows, the sharp nose, and the narrow lips set in a hard, straight line added to the sinister, cold look.

"Honest, mister, I didn't mean any harm. I just wanted to see the new family. Where are they?"

"Look, kid!...I'm the new family. Just me! And I don't like kids. Like

I told you before, get out and stay out.

Jan had never been one to be afraid, but with the warning still ringing in her ears, she walked hurriedly out to the road. As soon as she was out of sight of the house, she seemed to fairly fly up the road until she reached her house.

"Jan! What happened? You're all out of breath and you look like you've seen a ghost!"

"Oh, nothing mother. I've just been running." Jan had decided not to tell her mother what had happened just yet, for she knew her mother wouldn't let her go back...and this would never do. She just had to find out what was going on.

The next week Jan was busy with her friends and school, so she didn't get a chance to go to the old Wilson Place, but bright and early the next Saturday morning, she was up and on her way down the road. As she came to the trees surrounding the house, she stopped and peeked around them. There didn't seem to be any activity anywhere, so she stealthily crept up to the back door. The door stood wide open, but there was no one inside. Upstairs Jan could hear someone banging things around. Filled with fear, but too curious to stop, she crept up the stairs.

"I wonder which room he's in," she thought, as she inched along the hall, back to the wall. "Oh, this must be the one, for I hear noise inside." Cautiously she turned the knob and started to push the door open. The door swung slowly open. Then Jan could see the man inside the room, pulling open drawers and talking to himself.

"Where is the money?" That old guy was trying to tell me when he died. I guess I shouldn't have hit him and the old woman so hard. Well. I'll find it. It's too bad I couldn't come and get the money right after I killed them, but people would have been suspicious. It's a cinch the money isn't in this room." As the man spoke these words, he turned sharply around, and before she had a chance to move, he had seen Jan. He pulled her into the room and spoke in a low, cold, harsh voice. "Well, if it isn't my little friend the snoop. Come to check up on the new family, eh? How much did you hear...Well, never mind that. I'll have to get rid of you just like I did the old—" as the man spoke, he seemed to freeze and his arms slipped to his side.

Jan spun quickly around into her mother's arms. As she did so, she saw two policemen, one with a pistol in his hand.

'Good work, Jan. We've been after this guy for months. At last we've gotten the evidence we need, thanks to you."

Then Jan's mother spoke. "Little girl, if I weren't so glad to see you all right, I'd spank you. The next time you decide to play detective tell me about it first. If I hadn't seen you sneaking down the road, I wouldn't have known anything about this. Then, what would have happened?"

"Well, I'm glad you did see me...I wonder what the next family who moves into the house will be like."

"I don't know what they'll be like, but when you come to see, I'm coming with you," said Jan's mother. Then, laughing, she added, "Maybe both of us can find a mystery.'

With These Skilled Hands

When a nurse walked into the Medical Staff Dining Room to tell me I was being awaited in the surgical amphitheater, I pushed back my scarcely touched cup of coffee and left the room, knowing that within twenty minutes I would be performing a heart operation so very delicate that the life of the patient would be determined by the skill of my hands!

As I left the dining room I knew that I was being watched very closely. There were more than a score of physicians who envied my prestige as Chief Cardiac Surgeon at Downer Hospital, yet I knew that each and every one of them wished me well. Out of all these doctors, I alone was the one qualified to perform the dangerous and difficult valvular heart operation on the child who now lay in Surgery.

Richard Boone, M.D. Three years postgraduate study in Heart Surgery and Cardiology. Member of the research team who had developed the simple life saving technique of direct cardiac massage. Unmarried. Age: 34. Description: tall, with a blond shock of unruly hair. Hands unusually long, thin and sensitive, a surgeon's hands.

Those were my statistics and they had earned me a respected reputation which was vital to my career.

The amphitheater was filled and came to a hushed silence when I entered. I had scrubbed, put on my gloves, a surgical nurse fitted a mask over my nose and mouth. At my side was my assistant, Dr. Robertson, and the remainder of the surgical team was made up of an anesthesiologist, two interns and four capable nurses.

The operation commenced at once. The child on the table was a "blue baby", a four year old who had a serious defect of the heart which was channeling blood into the wrong vessels, thus bypassing the lungs and depriving the blood of vital The heart defect was responsible for the child's bluish color. examination indicated that the child would die if the operation were not a success.

I made an incision on the tiny, heaving chest and calmly described my technique as I went along. The tiny microphone at my throat magnified my voice so it reached the hundred or more medical men seated in the surgical theater.

I knew these experienced men were studying every motion of my hands, watching the way my fingers guided the razor sharp scalpel into deep, pulsating heart tissue. At this crucial stage, a mishap would be fatal. In addition, there was the huge television screen above me and the cameras with telescopic lenses suspended over the surgical table. Throughout the country, more than 40,000 physicians were watching me perform this delicate operation through a closed television circuit.

Agreeing to demonstrate a new surgical operation was one thing, but performing it under countless eyes was another. I did my best to conceal my nervousness—to hold back any tremor in my tapered fingers. I knew at that moment, my skilled hands held the key to my future. If the surgery were bungled or were the patient to die, my career as a heart surgeon would likely come to an end.

The operation was a success! When my patient was wheeled into the recovery room, I pulled off my mask and gave my conclusions to my audience.

In the weeks that followed, I received an overwhelming lot of complimentary letters, congratulatory telegrams, and phone calls. Being reminded that I was now the man of the hour made me think back to my childhood days when my mother had wished me to be violinist.

"You must take care of your hands and fingers, Richard," she then admonished. "They'll be your fortune someday." Even though my interest had switched to the operating room and surgical scalpel, my hands remained my fortune.

Months and then a year rolled by. I saw my hospital expand and add units until it was rated among the most important of heart research centers. I had limited my surgical practice to children because their cases offered the greatest challenge.

One day the telephone rang. It was Doctor Robertson. "Here's something interesting I think you should see, Richard," he said. "We have a new patient on Ward Eight. The poor child hasn't much of a chance.'

I took the hospital elevator up to the eighth floor. Ward Eight was not a happy place. It was a place of "No Return". Most of the children on the ward were under oxygen tents or had their tiny arms punctured with needles pouring life-giving blood and plasma into their exhausted bodies. This ward for desperate heart cases, where chances of recovery were slight, was far from a pleasant place.

Dr. Robertson was listening to a child's heart with his stethoscope when I reached the room. A nurse in attendance handed me the admisison chart. The child's name was Patricia Whitestone. She was seven years old, red-headed and freckled, and I could see her wide blue eyes follow every move I made. She was clutching a large doll and held it snug against her chest. It was the only toy the hospital permitted her to take from home.

Even though I had been calloused to the miseries of little children by years of hospital experience, the sight of the child gasping for breath and trying to hide her fright at being in a strange place far away from home was enough to make me dab at my eyes.

I busied myself with the history. It was typical. Patti—as the nurses called her—was afflicted with rheumatic heart disease. The condition was medically known as stenosis. Having a defective heart caused the child many hardships. She had failed to gain weight and couldn't play or exercise. Her parents, people of moderate means, had spent their savings trying to do something for Patti. Now, she was charity case.

Our first examination indicated the child might live less than six months. Patti's heart was virtually beating itself to death! No heart, no matter how brave and valiant, could continue to beat against such overwhelming physical odds.

Early the next morning, I visited my little patient and removed her oxygen mask so as to talk to her. "Will I get better, Dr. Boone?" Patti asked. Her doll, which had never left her side throughout the night, was now being clutched more firmly than ever.

"Honey," I said, taking Patti's hand. "I'm going to do everything possible to make you well. That's my special promise to you."

"Your hands are so smooth and clean," Patti said when I stood up to leave. "My daddy works in a factory and his hands are always dirty and rough. I wish his hands were like yours."

"They would be if he were a doctor, Patti," I said. "As long as hands are loving and gentle, how they look and feel really doesn't matter.'

I looked at my hands wondering if they contained enough skill to help a little girl whom doctors had given up. Unless my hands could perform some type of miracle for Patti, she was virtually condemned to die!

When the many reports came into the laboratory, I busied myself studying them. From the looks of the reports, Patti had a chance. I called Dr. Robertson and within two minutes he came rushing into my office. "There's definitely a chance for the Whitestone child," I advised him as he entered the room. "We'll operate within twenty-four hours."

"Twenty-four hours!" he said in pure amazement. "Why so soon?"

"Simply because, the sooner we do it—the better! Now go tell the nurses to get the operating table ready and the instruments at hand." On this, I left the room and went to tell Patti of the operation.

The next morning, they wheeled Patti into surgery. I was all ready and waiting. The operation began at once. Everything went fine until I reached the crucial stage of the operation. The dilator slipped away from my gloved fingers and when I grabbed at it, it penetrated deep into my skin. When I handed it to one of the nurses for replacement, blood was spurting in a torrent from my cut hand.

"It's very deep, Doctor Boone," one of the interns said. "You've cut the main nerve and that demands emergency surgical attention. Delay may affect the future use of your hand!"

I hesitated but a second, but it was long enough for me to think. If I turned back now, having reached the point of no return, Patti might die. If only Dr. Robertson were here to assist me. If only Dr. Robertson were here to assist me. If only he hadn't been called away on an emergency case!

"We continue!" I declared, giving my decision. There was a look of approval in everyone's eyes. Miss Cartwright quickly placed a compress over my wound and slid another sterile glove over my hand.

After I finished the heart massage, I left the operating room, and went to seek immediate attention for my hand. The neuro-surgeon seemed quite concerned over my injury.

"It looks as though I may have to give up my career as a heart Surgeon." My hopelessness must have shown in my face, for the Neuro-Surgeon smiling said, "Dr. Boone, I hope you won't think this forward of me, but sir, you just saved a child's life. That should be the greatest thing that could happen to a Surgeon, to know he gave his all for a patient."

And now it is two years and five months since I left Downer Hospital. I am now teaching at the University of Virginia. I realize now how right that Neuro-Surgeon was. I now spend my time going through manuscripts and great books to find and give my students a word, phrase or a paragraph, that will give them courage and prestige and give them the strength from within themselves, that must, and will make them great Surgeons some day.

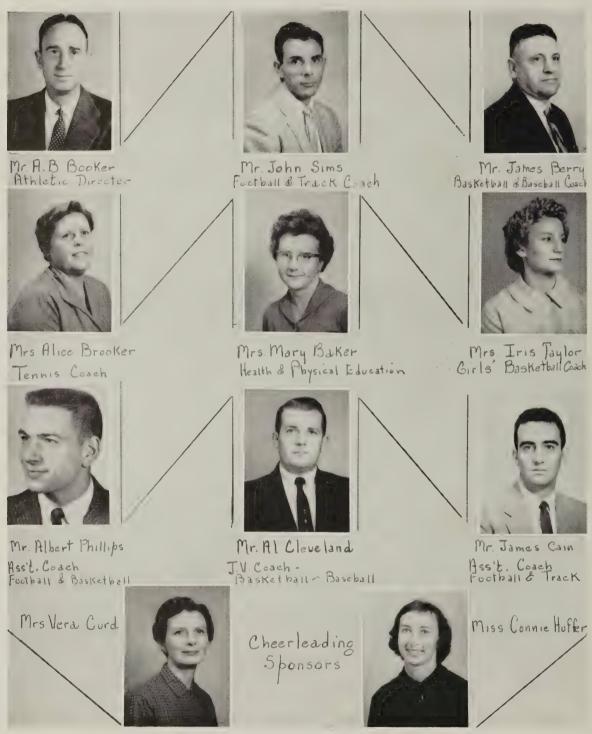

I have now found a new job for these skilled hands.

Did You Hear This One??

JOKES

Lewis Morrison: "Dad do you remember the story you told me about how you were kicked out of high school?"

Dad: "Sure, Why?"

Lewis: "Well, isn't it funny how history repeats itself."

Tommy Rankin: "This liniment makes my arm smart." Hank Coyner: "Why not rub some on your head?"

Mrs. Taylor: "What did you find out about the salivary glands?" Sue Thomas: "I couldn't find out a thing, they're too darn secretive."

Mosquito: "Why are you making such a fuss?" Ditto: "Whoopee! I passed the screen test."

GROCERY STORE SONGS

Lemon call you sweetheart
Olive you truly
Carrotlina moon
In a little spinach town
Breadway melody
We won't turnip till morning
Lettuce talk about my sweetie
You were mint for me
The one I love just can't be buttered with me
Weenies spring time in the rockies
Effervating mama.

"Nice blind on the window, Abe?"

"Yes Isac."

"Who paid for it, Abe?"
"The customers, Isac."

"The customers. How is that?"

"Yes Isac. I put a little box on the counter for the blind; and t'ey paid for it."

Daffynition of degrease: Wayne Schooley's degrees.

Ronnie Strickler: "I am burning with love for you." Lola Christian: "Don't make a fuel of yourself."

"Why does your dog keep turning around in circles?" "He's a watch dog, and he's winding himself up."

Shirley Shiflett: "Can you drive with one arm?"

Richard Robertson: "Sure." Shirley: "Well, have an apple."

Miss Garland: "Tommy tell me what it means when one says I love, you love, he loves."

Tommy Blacka: "That means that it ain't gonna be any cowboy story."

Kay Dixon: "Where are you going? Your fudge is boiling over?"

Joyce Fauber: "I know. It says in the directions when it boils beat it."

Kay Truxell: "Oh Bob, let's set our wedding date for next Saturday."

Bob Miller: "Oh not Saturday, I have a date that night."

Alec Thompson: "What's a bachelor?"

Kirk Stewart: "A fellow who didn't have a car when he was young."

Roscoe Miller: "What is love?"

Ronnie Bowman: "It is the emotion that makes a young fellow want to pay some girl's board bill when he can't pay his own."

We hope so. Because we have interesting jobs for "special" gals here at the telephone company.

If you're alert and like people, you'll like it here. The surroundings are pleasant, the pay is good right from the start—and you'll have lots of opportunity for advancement and raises.

There's a "special" extra, too. You'll have that wonderful feeling of making an important contribution to your community. Come talk to us about telephone work. We'd love to meet you!
